

About Dr. George Yancy

George Yancy is the Samuel Candler Dobbs Professor of Philosophy at Emory University and a Montgomery Fellow at Dartmouth College, one of the college's highest honors. He is also the University of Pennsylvania's inaugural fellow in the Provost's Distinguished Faculty Fellowship Program (2019-2020 academic year). Yancy is the author, editor, and coeditor of over 20 books, including Black Bodies, White Gazes; Look, A White; Backlash: What Happens When We Talk Honestly about Racism in America; and Across Black Spaces: Essays and Interviews from an American Philosopher published by Rowman & Littlefield in 2020. He is known for his influential essays and interviews at the New York Times philosophy column "The Stone," and at the prominent political website, Truthout. He is also "Philosophy of Race" Book Series Editor at Lexington Books.